

Early Intervention Complaints: A Guide for Families

You can file an EI complaint if your child is not getting services in any area they should get them.
This can help get services faster and/or get extra services to make up for missed services.

When should you think about filing a complaint?

You should think about filing a complaint if:

- Your child is not getting services in any area they should get them, and/or
- Any EI timelines are not met (see below).

What are the EI timelines?

- Within 2 work days after your child's doctor (or other professional) refers them, a person from the Child and Family Connections agency (CFC) that works in your county (list here), must call you to set up a meeting.
- Within 45 calendar days after you say they can, the CFC must set up tests and make a plan that includes the services your child will get (called an IFSP).
- Within 30 calendar days after you get an IFSP and consent to services, the CFC must make sure services start.

If these timelines are not met, you can call your CFC/service coordinator to fix the problem. If that doesn't work, you should file a complaint with the Illinois Department of Human Services (DHS). You need to file your complaint within one year of the date of the problem.

Why file a complaint?

Your complaint will let DHS know about the problem so they can help by:

- Getting your child services faster, and/or
- Getting extra services to make up for the services your child missed.

DHS will look into the problem and must contact you with a decision within 60 calendar days.
